What We Look For

Skills can be taught. These qualities cannot. Do you recognize yourself?

Patience That Inspires

You believe every child learns at their own pace. You explain the same concept five different ways until it clicks.

Genuine Empathy

A child's emotional wellbeing matters more than completing a lesson plan. You notice when something is off.

Ownership Mindset

When a child struggles, you look at your methods first. You're committed to their 3-month journey.

Honest Communication

You'd rather be truthful with parents about challenges than oversell progress. Trust is everything.

Growth Orientation

You're always learning. Feedback makes you better. You celebrate small wins along the way.

Professional Reliability

You honor commitments. When you say you'll be there at 5 PM, you're there at 4:55 PM.

Your Journey to Partnership

A thoughtful process to ensure we're the right fit for each other.
